Dreams of Opening A Bakery Come True

By: Kala Hazelhoff

Mandy Grosky has been dreaming of opening a store front bakery in Canton for the past thirteen years. Now, opening Crumb & Candy, a part of that dream is coming to fruition. She finds joy being in the kitchen and creating things, where she feels her talent comes naturally. Whether that be decorating donuts, cookies, or candy.

Grosky was born in Milbank, but lived her entire life in Canton, graduating from CHS in 2007. A couple of years after high school, she went to culinary school and graduated in 2010. She married her husband Jeff in 2013 and they have three boys at home: Jax, Brooks, and Rhett.

She enjoys every aspect of the bakery life, having worked at a Hy-Vee bakery for over 10 years. Her experience ranges from cake decorating, artisan bread, donuts, cookies, and anything in between. Bakery is her passion, but one thing she had not had the opportunity to learn how to do was make candy. So, when an opportunity arose a couple of months ago for an affordable candy stove for sale in Minneapolis, her mom drove with her to pick it up. Since then, it has taken off and has become "Crumb and Candy." Grosky has taught herself how to make various kinds of hard candy and plans to keep learning techniques and distinctive styles as she evolves. On the weekends, her cousins Calli and Finley love to help her.

"I have found it's really a dying art and not many people make candy by hand anymore, but it's always been so interesting to me. Canton always had a bakery when I was growing up and I can still remember the excitement I got when my family would go in and pick out donuts, cookies, breads, and other treats. I think it is something that's been missing from our community for a long time. For now, I will stay working from home but plan to sell at Farmers Markets and other events.

Optimistic For a Positive Outcome

Judge Studying Information before Rendering a Decision
Whether to Dismiss NOPE Lawsuit Against the State

By Virginia Olson

Neighbors Opposed to Prison Expansion (NOPE) got their day in court Monday, Jan. 22 and walked away feeling like they were listened to. Judge Jennifer Mammenga made it clear that she would hear both sides of the case and that no ruling was going to be made that day.

Over 100 people filled a Lincoln County courtroom and overflow room in Canton as the State of South Dakota argued to dismiss NOPE's lawsuit in the hour-long hearing. The State believed that it had no legal need to comply with county or city rules when building on its own property. But it's what the State wanted to build that has become a bone of contention - a $341.6M men's state prison.

Breaking News!

In November, the non-profit filed a suit against the South Dakota Department of Corrections (DOC) and others seeking a declaratory judgment that would force the state to follow local zoning laws and take its plans for the proposed men's state prison before the Lincoln County Planning Commission.

It was last October that NOPE along with the rest of Lincoln County felt blindsided by the Department of Corrections when The Dakota Scout reported the state had chosen rural Lincoln County and 320 acres of farmland 15 miles south of Sioux Falls as the site for its new, 1500-bed, state prison. The State's lack of transparency and the fact that it sidestepped the concerns of those living close to the prison became the basis for NOPE's major arguments. NOPE felt local zoning was ignored.

The group also felt the state made no effort to answer important questions that needed answering. Concerns about a decline in property value as well as infrastructure and water and sewer needs for an area the size of a small town required discussion.

A judge listens

Though two public forums didn't give NOPE any answers, the group did get its day in court after the state asked that NOPE's lawsuit be dismissed. The state requested the dismissal citing eminent domain, its immunity from certain lawsuits and that state entities are not subject to local zoning and scrutiny. The state cited a 46-year-old Janklow ruling to support its contention.

NOPE's lawsuit against the state contended that this "general rule" had a weak legal argument and challenged its validity as there is no state law or Supreme Court case explicitly exempting the state from adhering to local zoning rules.

During the hearing, the State argued that law and order is the "sacred" duty of the State as specified in the constitution and that the State has a law on the books that grants condemnation power to the DOC for the purpose of building a prison.

Counties only exist as a government entity because the state created them said Assistant Attorney General Grant Flynn. "The master cannot be beholden to its creation."

Flynn's remarks were not the first comments about the State's right to move forward with a new prison.

After the October announcement, the state has maintained its silence about its decision. That silence came to an end in January when Governor Noem did speak publicly about the prison site during a Watertown radio show. "The site (of the prison) has been chosen," she said. "This is where the prison will be built."

The landowners continue to contend that the State needs to make its case to the county even though the State already owned the land it had selected for the new prison. The disputed land had been leased to farmers until last year when the Department of Corrections took over ownership from the State Office of School and Public Lands.

A.J. Swanson, the lawyer representing the Lincoln County landowners, argued that none of the laws or court decisions presented by the state gave the DOC the right to ignore the county. He also pointed out that House Bill 1017 from the 2023 legislative session allocated funds for a prison but didn't give the DOC the right to disregard the regulations set up in Lincoln County and that "state law can't overrule local law."

In Flynn's rebuttal, he pointed out that no one has been hurt by the state prison.

Though he admitted the prison might not be welcome, it's the state's duty to provide law and order.

"No one wants a prison in their backyard," he said. "But no one wants to live in a state without a prison."

"We know we have a fight on our hands, and we aren't giving up!"

NOPE feels its claims are legitimate and now await Judge Mammenga's decision. Ironically, the State's call for dismissal made it possible for NOPE's voice to finally be heard.

Landowner Mary Geraets' hope going into the hearing was that the judge in the case would "listen and be fair" and give NOPE what she called a "fighting chance."

"At the hearing we had limited time to make our points known, but the fact that our concerns are now on record and a judge was listening is a good thing."

A week after the hearing, NOPE continued its cause to fight the state's decision. Monday, January 29 NOPE representatives headed to Pierre to hear what the SD legislature Appropriations Committee had to say as committee discussed funding for the prison. "We want the Legislature to know they have a fight on our hands."

Geraets says NOPE will not give up. "It has cost us all a lot of time, money and stress, but we know that this case isn't over! Whatever the Judge's decision, one side or the other will be appealing."

A Solution in Search of a Problem

By Sen. John Thune

An internet connection is something we increasingly depend on in just about every area of our life these days. There remains work to be done to get a reliable connection to more Americans, especially in rural areas like South Dakota. But thanks in large part to the light-tough regulatory approach we have taken in the past, the internet in the United States continues to advance, delivering greater benefits for Americans online.

Given the success of this light-tough approach, one has to wonder why the Biden Federal Communications Commission (FCC) is now pushing for a return to heavy-handed net neutrality rules last attempted under the Obama administration. The basic premise of net neutrality – that internet service providers shouldn't prioritize certain internet traffic at the expense of other traffic – has strong bipartisan support. The issue is that the Biden FCC aims to go much further and, under the guise of net neutrality, assert broad new government powers over the internet using rules designed for telephone monopolies during the Great Depression. Like the Obama-era rules before it, the latest net neutrality proposal threatens to decrease investment in broadband and subject the internet to more government interference, like regulating prices.

In 2017, a new Republican majority on the FCC repealed the Obama-era net neutrality rules. The prospect was met with near-hysteria as Democrats warned that the internet as we knew it would disappear, that speeds would slow to a crawl, and that we would get the internet one word at a time. But anyone who's been online in the last seven years knows none of this came to pass. In fact, the internet hasn't just survived, it's thrived since then. Innovation has flourished. Competition has increased. And internet speeds have gotten faster and faster.

It's unclear what the Biden FCC's so-called net neutrality proposal is trying to achieve besides more government control. As FCC Commissioner Carr has pointed out, there's reason to fear this proposal could drive up Americans' internet costs and open the door to new taxes and fees on your internet bill. This proposal could also decrease investment in broadband expansion, which would be devastating for rural areas like South Dakota where investment is critically needed.

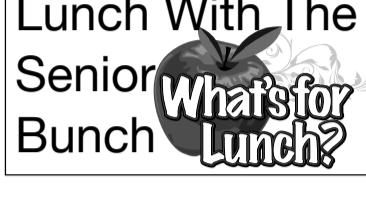

More red tape is not the solution to bridging the digital divide. Reducing the burdensome regulations that stifle broadband expansion has long been a priority of mine. The permitting process is just one example of this. While my MOBILE NOW Act helped move the federal government in the right direction, there continues to be unnecessary delays and costs associated with permitting that get in the way of expanding internet access. I will continue to work for accountability and efficiency in federal broadband programs to ensure more South Dakotans have access to a reliable internet connection.

Plans for increased government interference, like the FCC's net neutrality proposal, are often a solution in search of a problem. America has played a leading role in the digital age in large part because we've adopted a light-tough approach to internet regulation. There is absolutely no reason for heavy-handed interference in a free, open, and thriving sector of our economy, and I will continue my work to remove unnecessary regulations that cause Americans to lose out on the benefits of internet innovation.

PeopleA LOOK BACK AT THE STORIES AND HISTORY OF LINCOLN COUNTY

By Gaynor Johnson

If you are of Scandinavian descent, especially Norwegian, you should check out a wonderful book written by Hjalmar Rued Holand entitled Norwegians in America: The Last Migration. Even if you don't have Nordic blood coursing through your veins and you enjoy reading about our nation's history, and the pioneer adventure that shaped it, you should seek out this book.

I first read Norwegians in America back in the late 1970's after it was translated into English. I had forgot about it until I recently came across it while looking for material to use for this column. The work Mr. Holand put into this book is mind-boggling. In every paragraph you can feel the love and respect he had for those who left Norway and migrated to the United States established settlements from New York on through the heartland of the midwest. It's always quite exciting to come across passages in a book regarding my little hometown on the prairie. I have included what Mr. Holand had to say about Canton, Beloit and the area around the Big Sioux River. Since I have deep roots involving Norway and Sweden on my mother's side of the family, rereading this book really opened my eyes to how and why my ancestors ended up in Lincoln County back in the late 1860's.

I should mention that this book was originally published in 1930 by H. Aschehoug and Co. (W. Nygaard) in Oslo, Norway. It was translated from Norwegian to English by Helmer M. Blegen. The preface and translation were copyrighted in 1978 by Evelyn Ostraat Wierenga who edited this book. It was republished by The Center for Western Studies, an agency of Augustana College (now University) in Sioux Falls, and printed by Modern Press in 1970.

It's hard to believe that we've almost made it through the first month of the year. With February beginning on Thursday, that means it's Groundhog Day on Friday. We all know that old man winter doesn't pay much attention concerning the shadow of a woodchuck and will hang around until it runs out of steam. I'm hoping for an early spring, especially after what took place last year, but I'm not holding my breath. The weather will do what it wants to do and always will.

Before I sign off, please remember to support the Canton Community Center's Spaghetti Supper Fundraiser, February 4 at the Senior Center. The large grant from the Canton-Inwood Health Foundation brings this much needed addition to the Canton one step closer to fruition.

Happy reading and keeping on the sunny side.

Excerpts From *Norwegians in America: The LostMigration by Hjalmar Rued Holand

Near the southeast corner of South Dakota and northeast of these settlements on the Missouri Bottoms in the location of an attractive little town called Canton. It has a population of about 2,000 and has become a highly desirable place of refuge for prosperous elderly farmers who have built fine homes in town, where they enjoy comfortable and leisurely retirement. They have also built one of the largest and imposing church structures to be seen outside of great cities. In addition, they have here a large institution of higher education - Augustana Normal School- where their children can acquire an excellent education. Located about two miles south of town, they also have the biggest children's home in Norwegian-America, the Beloit Orphans' Home. As an example of steady, intelligent Norwegian enterprise and progress, Canton with its vicinity is as fine as any Norwegian town in America.

Canton lies on the west and north banks of the Big Sioux River, which meanders among a series of low, wooded hills. Surrounding the town are many large Norwegian congregations, primarily on the Dakota side but also in Iowa.

The founder of this community was a Halling with rich experience, broad vision, and ample means. His name was Halvor Nilsen (or Nelson), and he came from the gaard Espeseth in Gol, Hallingdal, in the year 1846 with his parents, brothers and sisters. This family arrived in Milwaukee with a total capital of one dollar, and there was no one to meet them when they arrived. Their destination was Rock Prairie, the American Mecca of the Halling immigrants. Leaving their baggage at the station, they set out with much confidence and little else. They carried some sandwiches and a few coffee beans as provisions. And, dressed in their colorful Hallingdal mountain garb, they walked the eighty-five miles to their destination. Now and then, the youngest children had to be carried, but eventually they arrived at Rock Prairie. In 1849 Halvor Nilsen staked west to look for land. In Clayton County, in eastern Iowa, he found what he was looking for, and here he founded a sizable settlement of Norwegians from Hallingdal and Hadeland.

Shortly thereafter, rumors of the discovery of gold in California swept like wildfire through the settlement. Halvor Nilsen and two of his brothers became infected with the gold fever and joined the gold rush to the West. Many of these adventures perished before reaching their destination, and of those who made it alive to California, not many found any gold. Halvor Nilsen was one of the lucky few, for he came back with enough wealth to establish himself as a big-scale farmer in Clayton County. In the course of the next few years, an increasing number of Hallings arrived in Clayton County, and many of them found employment on Nilsen's seven hundred acre farm. Many others came to this affable and understanding man to seek counsel or assistance.

Before long, all the desirable land in Clayton County was taken up, and new arrivals had to go farther west to seek homesteads. Consequently, Halvor Nilsen himself decided in 1867 to pull up stakes and look for a suitable location where he might start a large Norwegian settlement farther west. He explored all of western Minnesota as well as the adjoining areas of Iowa and Dakota. At long last, he discovered the superb tracts along the Big Sioux River in the vicinity of the future town site of Canton, S.D. Here he found the finest and most fertile soil he had ever encountered in his wide travels. Here was deep, rich loam covering an endless vista of prairie landscape, gently rolling, yet flat enough to permit a man to plow all day long in a straight line without encountering a natural obstacle. The Big Sioux River, winding through the middle of this fertile valley, leaped over many a cataract and waterfall. Here was power to turn millstones. A broad, green belt of dense woods on both sides of the river would furnish timber for sawmills. Now he had found the perfect location on which he could place his countrymen in new homes. In his mind's eye, he saw great Norwegian communities arise in this glorious but uninhabited region, communities in which cities, churches, and schools would appear and flourish. Jubilant over finding such an excellent place to which he could lead his inexperienced countrymen, Halvor Nilsen bought from the government 5,373 acres along the river. For several reasons, he preferred the east side of the river, I.E. in Iowa.

The group, starting out from Clayton County in the spring of 1868 under Halvor Nilsen's leadership, consisted of more than thirty families, the majority of which were from Hallingdal and Hadeland. With their many cattle and much personal property, the group could not travel swiftly. It took them more than three weeks to travel the distance of three hundred miles. The youngsters chased the cattle, picked flowers, and thought the journey was delightful experience. The grown ups found the trip quite boring but there were several good fiddlers in the group who helped make the evenings lively with many a springdans and Hallingdans.

On the last half of their journey, they crossed over land that looked so good to them that they said to Halvor, "Here is as good a soil as anyone could desire. Why go any farther?" But Halvor insisted that they continue onward and said, "Just wait till you get to the Big Sioux River! This land is nothing but gumbo, a sticky watertight mud."

Finally, they arrived at the place where Canton was later to be built. Here they found that Halvor's enthusiastic descriptions were not exaggerated. Never had they seen a more attractive and fertile area. This surpassed their wildest dreams! Happy at having found the setting for developing their future careers, they scattered in every direction to pick out the sites for their homesteads. Almost all of them filed on land on the Dakota side, because a recent prairie fire on the Iowa side had destroyed the grassland so necessary for grazing. Each family lived temporarily in its own wagon on its respective quarter section until the new arrivals had time to build sod houses.

Windmill Of My Mind

by Margaret Schultz

Because of the weather, we were not able to get everyone together for Christmas. We immediately came up with an alternative date to get together, and that day is tomorrow.

We texted and/or emailed back and forth about our menu, and who would bring what. Our main goal is to be able to keep it simple and quick so we can just relax and visit and argue over whose turn it is to hold four-month old Raegan, while Great- Grandpa Bob has to go downstairs with 2 year old Carter to run the trains.

Well, obviously, there has to be some meal preparation, not to mention last minute cleaning projects. As I have been changing sheets, dusting, sprucing things up, and cooking/baking, it got me to thinking about anticipating the visit of a loved one and how I also need to be anticipating the second coming of our Lord. The Bible says it will happen and Jesus, Himself, said He would come again to receive us unto Himself, that where He is, we may be also. We prepare for company, vacations, shopping, committee meetings, and numerous other things, but how often do we think about that most important event?

I do think about it fairly often, but do I prepare? I read Scripture every day and pray often throughout the day and night. I rejoice in the joy of my salvation and am thankful. Hmmm. But am I really preparing, as I would for a trip?

For a trip, we plan what we will take – what we will wear – and who is going with us? As we prepare for Heaven, Glory, Paradise, who will we anticipate seeing when we get there? God's forgiveness and Grace enable us to go to Heaven, and we can acknowledge and accept that, but only for ourselves. Each person must accept God's Salvation for himself or herself. Do we know whether our family members or friends have made that choice?

After my life was spared a year ago in December, I have made it my mission to make sure I am ready to go and to be reassured that my family and friends are, as well.

Kind of a different topic this week, but that is what the old Windmill brought up and I can't promise anything more than that.

Whoever you are, reading this, may God Bless you.

With love, Margaret

Taking Care of Veterans, an Unending Legacy

The South Dakota Department of Veterans Affairs (SDDVA) is an essential advocate for veterans, offering personal case development and tracking state and federal claims for benefits that veterans have earned. We focus on our core mission of providing professional-level representation to obtain federal and state benefits, reinforcing our reputation as one of the most educated and experienced team of advocates.

We have seen a significant increase in claims filings over the last three years. SDDVA and our partners obtained more than $378 million in compensation and pension payments for veterans and their survivors in 2023.

In the military, personnel do not leave until the mission is complete. So, although we have secured great benefits for our veterans, there is always more to be done.

SDDVA has a new program called "What's Brewing." This program is a great opportunity for our leadership team to visit with veterans and hear first-hand about the issues they are experiencing, as well as allow for the opportunity for veterans to hear about new benefits and services. As the advocate for South Dakota veterans, we need to know what challenges our veterans and their families are facing.

You will also find our outreach team at such events as Veterans Day programs, Congressional forums, the State Fair, County Fairs, Memorial Day programs, VA sponsored events, Stand Downs, and Yellow Ribbons.

We encourage veterans to join our outreach events for conversation, information, and resources on benefits. Veterans can check out our calendar for outreach events in their area at <https://vetaffairs.sd.gov/publicaffairs/upcomingevents.aspx>.

We have also launched another new program, Operation VNF (Veterans Never Forgotten). VNF affords us the opportunity to communicate with our veterans in long term care facilities. This battle plan has three pathways – to visit with veterans, connect veterans with their local county or tribal veterans service officer, and educate the administrators about the need for VA approved rooms for veterans.

At the end of each day, our true measure of success will be the timeliness, the quality, and the consistency of the services provided to our veterans. They deserve nothing less.

To all those who have faithfully served, we thank you!

Greg Whitlock, Secretary
South Dakota Department of Veterans Affairs

Financial Focus

How can business owners plan for an exit?

If you're a business owner, you always have a lot to do and a lot to think about. But have you put much thought into how you'll eventually leave it all behind?

Even if you're a few years away from that day, it's a good idea to create an exit strategy. If you're like most other owners, most of your net worth may well be tied up in your business — so how you exit that business can have a big impact on your finances and your retirement.

As you begin the exit strategy process, you'll need to examine some basic questions, such as how much you want for your business and how much it's worth. But you'll especially need to plan for the mechanics of your exit — that is, just how you're going to sell or transfer ownership of it.

Essentially, you have three main options:

- Internal sale or transfer – You could sell or transfer your business to someone affiliated with the company, such as a family member, business partner or even a group of employees. The advantages of this method are that you'll have greater control over the timing of your exit, and you'll be able to provide greater continuity for your employees, clients and suppliers. One potential disadvantage is that your net sales proceeds may be less than what you'd get from selling the business to an unrelated third party.

- External sale or transfer – The biggest benefit of selling or transferring your business to an unrelated third party is that you can potentially maximize your net sales proceeds. But you'll need to consider some tradeoffs, too.

For one thing, a sale to an outside person or business usually requires a long and possibly expensive due diligence process. Also, you'll have less control over the timing of your exit than you would if you sold the business to an internal source.

- Liquidation – If you liquidated your business by selling all your assets and shutting down operations, you could end up with far fewer net proceeds than if you sold the business to an internal or external source. However, you could raise cash pretty quickly. But if you chose to liquidate or dissolve your business, it could potentially be disruptive for your employees, clients and suppliers.

Because everyone's situation is different, there's no clear-cut formula for deciding which of these exit options is right for you. And it isn't simply a matter of numbers, either, because you'll need to consider some intangible factors, too. How will your family be affected by your choice? How would you feel if your business was in someone else's hands, or no longer existed? You'll need to work out these issues, along with the financial ones, before you decide on your business exit strategy.

Fortunately, you don't have to go it alone. You may want to consult your financial, legal and tax advisors, and possibly work with a commercial banker and a business evaluation expert. By drawing on several sources of expertise, you can feel more confident that you'll make a decision that's appropriate for your needs.

One final suggestion: Don't wait too long before you begin putting together your exit strategy. Time goes fast — and when the time comes for you to say goodbye to your business, you'll want to be prepared.

OFF The Road With Jerry

This is the once famous old sand dune area southwest of Elk Point, S.D. up along the bank of Missouri River when we were young our folks took us there in the late 1960's to picnic and hike. It's high dunes, one after another for about 2 or 3 miles stretch on the river. Later I brought my kids there to play and ride our first 3 wheeler in the 1970's.

We rode all over but not quite next to the water because they were always caving in from the waves of the river. We found an old sort of boat landing in the bay, but didn't dare to trust it.

Unknown to us, we had to stop going there because it was fenced off and big warning signs to stay out in the 1980's and we could not find out who or what controlled this past favorite area. We had heard that too many parties from Sioux City had ruined it with garbage and litter. We also heard it may have been used for an occasional training ground for the National Guard. When we looked into it a few years ago, we found out part of this was a training area for Air Force bombers, who dropped mild bombs for target practice during World War II. This old picture shows a series of small smoke clouds from B-17 training planes

This photo was found in an S.D. Magazine that this guy lived on the Nebraska side of the river. This guy and friends sneaked across the river into this practice area to find very interesting souvenirs. Shown is a large bomb that fell and didn't detonate and defused it. They also found glove, goggles, headphones and a big long ammunition belt of 50 caliber.

This area must have been south of the sands partially because this looks like where a corn field had been and 2 explosions can be seen in the background by the rivers tree line.

What to Know About Becoming a Blood Donor

Hospitals have an urgent need for blood donations, as demand continues to outpace blood supplies, according to the American Red Cross. The organization says fewer donors contributed to the blood supply over the summer in 2023, creating a national blood shortage. As of the fall of 2023, donors of all types were urgently needed, and there was an emergency need for platelet donors and type O blood.

Individuals who are considering giving blood are urged to do so. Most people are eligible to give blood if they are in good health, although there are some basic eligibility guidelines, says the World Health Organization.

- Individuals between the ages of 18 and 65 often can give blood. Some countries make exemptions for younger and older donors if consent is obtained or at the discretion of responsible physicians.

- A person must weigh at least 50 kg (110 lbs.).

- One must feel well on the day of the donation, and should not have a cold, flu, sore throat, cold sore, stomach bug, or any other infection.

Cedars-Sinai says there are some reasons why people may be excluded from giving blood. These may vary depending on the state, province or country, so it's best to get clarification on the rules from a local donation organization. People who may be excluded include:

- Individuals taking antibiotics for an infection.

- Individuals who are currently using certain medications like anti-platelet agents, anticoagulants, acne treatments, drugs to treat rheumatoid arthritis, hair loss remedy or prostate symptom products, immunosuppressants, HIV prevention drugs, and more. A certain period of time between last usage and blood donation may need to pass, and more information can be obtained by speaking with a doctor.

- Individuals who have undergone dental surgery in the last 72 hours.

- Individuals with a history of HIV/AIDS.

- Individuals who have hepatitis or have come into close contact with hepatitis.

- Individuals who have used illegal IV drugs.

- Individuals who have experienced an unintentional needle stick.

- Individuals who, in the three months prior to donating, have traveled to an area where malaria is common.

- Individuals who spent a combined total of three months or more in the United Kingdom between 1980 and 1996.

- Individuals who spent a combined total of five years or more in France or Ireland between 1980 and 2001.

- Individuals who have gotten a tattoo in the last three months.

It is not advisable to give blood while pregnant or while breastfeeding.

Giving blood can be a life-saving gesture. Even if a person is not eligible to give blood, he or she can still volunteer with a blood collection organization and spread the word about blood donation.

Souvignier Places Second

Ted Souvignier, of Canton, placed 2nd at the Black Hills Stock Show Bid Calling Contest on January 28 in Rapid City. Souvignier is a third generation auctioneer with Souvignier Real Estate and Auctions and is also employed with Sioux Falls Regional Livestock.

Also placing at the contest were Dylan Kellemeyn from St. James, Minnesota (3rd) and Garrett Nunn from Laramie, Wyoming (1st).

Souvignier is currently serving as the President of the South Dakota Auctioneer's Association and will host the 2024 Auctioneers Convention in Sioux Falls in June.

Blood vs. Plasma Donation

Donating blood is a selfless act. Each year, blood donors collectively save the lives of millions of people across the globe. The American Red Cross reports that blood levels continue to be low, and hospital need often outpaces the rate at which many blood donation organizations can replenish their supplies. That reality results in emergency shortages. When people think about blood donations, they frequently envision whole blood donations. But it is possible to only donate plasma as well. And donors typically can donate plasma with greater frequency than they can donate blood. Whole blood donations include all four blood components: red blood cells, white blood cells, platelets, and plasma.

By contrast, plasma donation involves collecting only the plasma component of blood and returning the other three components to the donor, says Plasma Hero. The American Red Cross indicates plasma helps maintain blood pressure and volume; supplies critical proteins for blood clotting and immunity; carries electrolytes to muscles; and helps to maintain a proper pH balance in the body to support cell function. Plasma is around 90 percent water and is utilized in therapies to replace missing, deficient or malfunctioning proteins in people with life-threatening diseases, including primary immunodeficiency and hemophilia. It also can be Mesfin had 2 blocked shots with one each from Kuper, Anderson and Wallner. Mulder and Wallner each had 5 steals with 4 from Moore, Kuper 3 and one from Mesfin.

Canton then traveled to SF Lutheran on Friday night and the Hawks won 66-25 as they took a big lead in the 1st quarter when they outscored SFL 27-8 then 21-7 at halftime for 48-15 lead. In the 3rd quarter neither could find the basket and scored 8 points to SFL 4 then Canton scored 10 points in the 4th to 6 from SFL for the 66-25 win for the Hawks. Canton was led by Anderson with 16 points on 7 of 10 FG followed by Moore 10, Mulder 7, Wallner 6, Mesfin 6, Jarius Battese 4, Kuper 3, Alex Rhead 2, Aidan Jutting 2, Corbin Winquist 2. The Hawks were 30 of 58 FG, 2 of 13 in 3pt, and 2 of 4 FT. Mulder led the team with 3 assists. Defensively Canton was led by Anderson with 9 rebounds along with Mastalir 6, Mesfin 4, Kuper 4, Moore 2, Mason Bentz 2, Jeremy Eich 2, Wallner 1, Mulder 1, Rhead 1. Kuper, Mastalir and Mesfin each had a blocked shot and Moore led the hawks with 5 steals along with Mesfin and Wallner with 3 each, Mulder 2, Battese 2, Winquist 1, Mastalir 1, Bentz 1.

Saturday the Hawks traveled to Madison for the Dak 12 vs NEC tourney and the Hawks faced Deuel and came home with a 81-79 victory to put their record at 8-3. In the game the Hawks kept the game close in the first quarter but in the 2nd Deuel couldn't miss a shot and the Hawks went cold to trail at halftime. In the 3rd quarter fell down by 24 points as the shooting for both teams stayed the same heading into the final 8 minutes. In the 4th the Hawks turned up the pressure and Deuel went cold on their hot shooting and the Hawks climbed back into the game and with 2 minutes left in the game the Hawks trailed by 3 but after getting fouled and making their foul shots they took the lead with under a minute left. Deuel missed their shot and Canton rebounded strong and kept the lead with foul shots to hold on to win 81-79.

Sportstalk

By Rich Beitzel

It is Sunday night and I am sitting here trying to think of something to say but I can't think of anything. I did go to Madison on Saturday night to drive the boys basketball team to play Deuel and was treated to an exciting finish to the game as we were behind by a lot and fought our way back in the 4th quarter from down like 24 points to win by 2 at 81-79 with good free throws down the stretch and a lot of hustle all over the court by all the Hawk players. They are 8-3 and with some tough games coming up so good luck to the boys. The girls won on Saturday against Luverne and good luck as you head into the final part of your schedule and lets head into regions playing great so lets pick it and reach for the next level.

Congrats to our wrestlers as they won the Lee Wolf invitational on Saturday along with the girls team finishing 2nd to Pierre by just a couple points so good wrestling from both teams. The boys had 4 champions and the entire team placed in the top 8 and on the award stand so great job wrestlers. Next the boys have some miles to put on as they go to Platte this week and Parkston for some duals and then we prepare for Regions which will be at Canton High School this year on the 17th. First, we head to Watertown on the 10th for the state dual tourney so keep that in mind and put it down on the calendar. Now I have 2 weeks to worry about the Chiefs but for right now I am going to just enjoy this and worry about the next game next week. I will give you my predictions on the Superbowl in next week's sportstalk and I bet you will have a tough time trying to guess what that will be. GO NINERS!!!!!!

Keeping and Bearing Arms for Generations

By: Governor Kristi Noem
January 26, 2024

Growing up in rural South Dakota, shooting sports and hunting were a big part of how I was raised. Some of my favorite memories with my family are of our time hunting and shooting guns. And one of my earliest memories is pheasant hunting with my Grandma Dorris.

Many South Dakotans have the same kind of experiences with their own families and had similar upbringings. We are all very proud of our small-town way of life and our rural values – and that has led us to become the most Second Amendment-friendly state in the nation.

In South Dakota, we encourage our people to exercise their Second Amendment rights. Constitutional Carry was the very first bill that I signed into law as Governor. Two years ago, we became the first state in America to waive all fees for concealed carry permits. We even pay for people's federal background checks. So it doesn't cost South Dakotans a penny to exercise their Second Amendment rights. And last year, I signed an Executive Order which says that the state will not do business with any financial institution that infringes on people's Second Amendment Rights.

We have marketed our state as a Second Amendment haven. Last year, California became the first state in the nation to levy a special tax on guns and ammunition. I immediately invited California gun manufacturers to move here to South Dakota, and my Office of Economic Development is continuing to recruit firearms business from state that infringe on the Second Amendment. Freedom Works Here for gun sellers and manufacturers, and we are welcoming businesses that are looking for a state that supports their industry.

I am determined to uphold South Dakota's reputation as the most Second Amendment-friendly state in America for generations to come. That is where the South Dakota Shooting Sports Complex comes in. The Department of Game, Fish & Parks (GFP) has already started to move dirt on this world-class shooting range in the Black Hills.

Originally, this was going to be a federally funded project, but the Biden Administration is undermining it by changing the rules after they had already signed off. The good news is South Dakota has never relied on the federal government. I

We do things better on our own, anyways. That's why we're just going to raise the money and build this shooting range ourselves.

I am working with GFP to continue to build this range which will host world class events and positively impact our economy in the long term. We went to the National Shooting Sports Foundation's Shot Show to fundraise for this range. We met with leading firearms businesses from around the country who pledged their support – and some of them may even be interested in moving their companies to South Dakota.

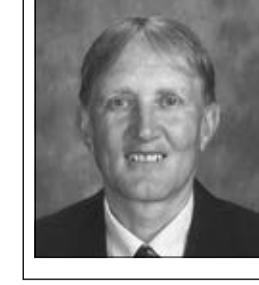

This will be the premier firearms range in the Midwest. It will give our residents and our visitors access to quality shooting ranges where they can learn safe and responsible use of firearms. The South Dakota Shooting Sports Complex will provide opportunities so that generations to come can learn to love shooting sports just as I did.

Pierre Perspective

SENATOR JIM BOLIN

The third week of the legislative session continued with budget presentations taking place in the Appropriations committee from the Board of Regents, the four technical colleges, and the Department of Education. The regents, which control all six colleges in the state, have one overriding financial priority. They want to maintain the current tuition freeze. This has helped maintain enrollment numbers in the system at a time when the number of traditional aged students (18 – 25) is dropping. The tuition in South Dakota is now equal to or lower than most bordering states. It will cost approximately eight million dollars to maintain our tuition at the current rate. I know that many on the committee are in favor of this policy. It is likely that this will not be able to be continued on a perpetual basis, but it might be possible for another year. Please note that any tuition freeze would also apply to our four technical colleges. They are a key part of training skilled workers in a host of different areas. As everyone can observe, companies all over the state are in dire need of workers. Our technical colleges help fulfill those areas of need. The governor is promoting South Dakota as a great place to live and work but it will take time to build up our population base.

The Department of Education is responsible for the K-12 educational system. They also appeared before the committee and outlined their plans. Most of their budget is money that will be sent to each school district based on enrollment and a few other factors such as sparsity and the need for children from foreign countries to acquire English proficiency. One program they want to enhance is the Science of Reading. This is a rebranding of what many know as teaching reading by the phonics method. It appears that many professional educators are now convinced that this will help not only reading but reading comprehension. The cost for this initiative is six million dollars spread out over four years. I am generally in favor of this program, but I am concerned that

Finally, by the time readers digest this we will have budget hearings for the Department of Corrections and Tourism. The Game, Fish and Parks Department plus the Attorney General and the Secretary of State will be later in the week. I know there will be many questions for the Secretary of Corrections as to the cost of the proposed prisons, both men's and women's. Thanks again to the newspapers who printed these reports, from myself and my colleagues. Jim.Bolin@sdlegislature.gov

AAA: Wash Winter Off Your Car or... Costly Repair Bills Could Clean Out Your Wallet

SIOUX FALLS, SD – Jan. 29, 2024 – If you don't wash winter off your car, costly repair bills could clean out your wallet instead. With warmer temperatures in the forecast this week, AAA South Dakota is reminding drivers to get their vehicles washed – especially the undercarriage – to reduce the potential for rust damage and the corrosion of brake and fuel lines car in drive-through car washes caused by winter road salts.

Previous AAA research indicates Americans spend $3 billion a year on repairs from rust damage caused by de-icers. "Taking the time for a quick car wash now could save vehicle owners both time and money down the road," said Shawn Steward, spokesman for AAA South Dakota.

AAA Car Care estimates the minimum cost to repair brake lines is around $150, but the fix could cost up to $1000 or more depending on the vehicle.

Safety Concerns

Washing winter off your car is not just about savings, it's about safety as well. In the past, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration issued a safety advisory linking road salt and de-icers to the corrosion of brake components that could, eventually, lead to brake failure, especially in older vehicles (2007 and earlier).

"Drivers are now keeping their cars longer so it is critical that they understand that keeping them clean is not just a matter of vanity," Steward added.

AAA recommends motorists take the following preventive steps to minimize damage and risk:

When possible, limit driving immediately before, during and after winter storms when salt and de-icing solutions car covered with road salt are being applied and are at their highest concentrations.

Frequently wash your vehicle, paying particular attention to the undercarriage. This will loosen, dissolve and neutralize road salts.

the next governor could change it. The plan extends beyond the term of Governor Noem and by 2027 we will have a new person occupying that office. They may have other priorities.

Floor action over the week was rather light as many bills have been defeated in committee or were very non-controversial. One bill that did get much attention was SB 9. Currently, clemency hearings for those incarcerated for life can take place every year. Some believe this is too frequent. SB9 mandated hearings once every four years. An alternative was to give the Parole Board the discretion as to when a clemency hearing could be held, either for four years or in some cases a hearing each year. After much respectful but spirited debate, a close vote occurred and by a one vote margin the bill passed. I was on the losing side in that vote as I favored discretion for the Parole Board in these very sensitive matters. I am sure this bill will get much attention when it goes to the other chamber.

Retirement system bills also passed out of the Retirement Law committee this last week and will go the floor in week four. SB 68 and SB 69 were not very controversial, and both should be passed quickly as both the Republican and Democrat members of the committee unanimously supported both proposed laws. The SDRS remains fully funded and is well managed. In July members will receive a small COLA adjustment of approximately 2%.

Finally, by the time readers digest this we will have budget hearings for the Department of Corrections and Tourism. The Game, Fish and Parks Department plus the Attorney General and the Secretary of State will be later in the week. I know there will be many questions for the Secretary of Corrections as to the cost of the proposed prisons, both men's and women's. Thanks again to the newspapers who printed these reports, from myself and my colleagues. Jim.Bolin@sdlegislature.gov

Legislative Report

By Kevin Jensen
REPRESENTATIVE

Sometimes we are faced with votes that could be used as a "score card" bill, but score cards do not always tell the whole story. If you are not familiar with scorecards, they are a record of your votes. Each lobby group, industry and civic watchdog groups pick specific bills to rank a legislator's votes and these groups are usually very selective in the bills they pick to score. HB1043 may be one of those bills. There are foreign governments and businesses that want to open pit and strip mine in the Black Hills for Lithium. This bill adds lithium as taxable, valuable mineral along with gold and silver. I voted for this tax to do whatever we can do to protect the Black Hills from destructive mining processes of foreign owned companies. This not a tax on South Dakota residents, however, the score card publishers may report that some members in the legislature voted for a 'new tax.' This tax is intended to protect the Black Hills and other areas of the state and not give foreign entities an easier path to strip mining the most beautiful lands in the state.

HB1090 is a bit of a complicated bill but it not hard to explain. Under current law, if someone purchases your property for the back taxes they get a tax deed and they can sell your property. If the property is sold, the purchaser of the tax deed gets to keep the profit from the sale of the property. If HB1090 makes it through the senate, the original owner of the property gets to keep the sale amount above the taxes, or the remaining equity. The bill is intended to minimize the predatory practice of making huge gains at your expense. People can still pay your taxes and then charge you a fee and interest but they cannot take all your equity on the process. I think this bill is a win for people struggling with back taxes, but it may have a hard time in the Senate.

HB1097 made it through the House Health and Human Services committee, but not easily. HB1097, in certain instances, would allow the air ambulance services to make a complete patient transport with their own ambulance. Air ambulance services often use their own ground ambulance to transport people to the airport to complete the air service. In some cases local EMS ambulance crews may be on another transport and cannot get the patient moved for what might be a long wait. The original proposal was that the air ambulance crew could make the transport if the wait was over an hour or if the medical provider want the patient moved quicker. The bill was heard on Tuesday and because 4 committee members were introducing their bills in other committees, a majority vote was not reached. In a committee of 13, you need 7 to pass, a majority of the committee, not a majority of those members present. The bill was deferred to Thursday for final action. In the meantime an amendment was offered as a compromise so I allowed each side 7 minutes of testimony on the amendment. The amendment would only allow the air ambulance crews to make a full transport if an air transport was ordered or necessary for the safety of the patient, and the weather grounded the aircraft, or they experienced mechanical problems. The bill passed 11-2 as amended.

Are you ready for a 40,000 pound driverless semis on our highways? In South Dakota we have no regulations for autonomous vehicles. If you are not familiar with what is coming, there are 6 vehicle types we must deal with. Level Zero has no automated features at all but may have blind spot sensor or lane departure warnings. Level One is what most newer cars are equipped with including adaptive cruise control, automated braking and lane centering. Level Two vehicles have more advanced features like automatic braking, lane guidance, collision sensors and more, but require the driver to be in control all the time. Level Three vehicles are much more advanced and can actually drive the car for you but a diver is still required behind the steering wheel. Now it gets interesting. Level Four vehicles can drive from place to place with no driver within a set area or boundaries like some of the driverless cabs you may have heard about. Level Five is totally driverless vehicles, including trucks, that can operate anywhere.

HB1095 was introduced to put some guidelines in place for these, but also allows for these vehicles to possibly operate on South Dakota roads before we are ready for them. I would argue that in South Dakota we may never be ready for them. An amendment was brought to allow local municipalities to set regulations on where Level Four and Five vehicles can operate, possibly restricted from school zones. That amendment was defeated. Have you ever been driving along in a heavy rain and the road in front of you is underwater, or even washed out? How will black ice or a glaze of freezing drizzle affect safety? How would they navigate during construction season? I think, for the time being, Level Five vehicles should be restricted until they are proven safe. This bill was also pitched as a workforce bill, I guess I am not sure how removing the drivers adds to the workforce. That bill did move to the senate.

The pace has picked up and most committees are hearing 4 or more bills in every session. If you have a question or want to contact me about a bill, please use my personal email because our legislative email accounts are swamped by lobbyists and groups from all over the country. Kevinj605@gmail.com. Remember, I represent you, not the government.

Lincoln County 106 the Next Big Thing!

Expansion and upgrades planned for the nine-mile thoroughfare that stretches across the county

By Virginia Olson

For all those who have traveled through northern Lincoln County and thought road construction and detours were done on Cliff Ave. and nearly complete on a major section of South Veterans Parkway, think again. Another major road project is on the drawing board. The Lincoln County Commission heard recommendations January 9 from engineering consulting firm HDR following a corridor study on what needs to be done to solve the traffic problems arising on Lincoln County 106.

Lincoln County 106 not only serves as a major east-west thoroughfare it also is now considered a "hard boundary" between Harrisburg and Sioux Falls. Also referred to as 271st Street, the road stretches nine miles across Lincoln County between Interstate 29 and 480th at Spring Creek Country Club.

Surging traffic volume

Highway 106 is now considered one of the busiest stretches of road in the county. As Sioux Falls and northern Lincoln County continue to grow, the volume of traffic has led to rush-hour backups especially between traffic signals at the intersections between Minnesota Ave and Cliff Ave. Traffic headaches and long lines for turning were especially apparent when much of Cliff Ave. was under construction.

Just how heavy is traffic? A corridor study released in March of 2023 showed the west end of Highway 106 at the Louise, Minnesota and Cliff Avenue intersections has as many as 37,000 vehicles cross per day. The east end ranges between 7500 and 22,500 each day.

More lanes and varied methods of intersection control

Traffic flow and how traffic crosses each intersection are major considerations as the plans come together to upgrade Lincoln County 106.

As the corridor stretches nine miles west to east, Louise Avenue is the only intersection with a roundabout. A four-way stop is in place at the intersection with Western Avenue, followed by two traffic lights at Minnesota and Cliff and a two-way stop at Southeastern.

These five intersections will be the main focus in the next five years as engineers are recommending roundabouts at Western, Cliff and Southeastern. The lights at Minnesota Ave. and Highway 106 would remain in place as that intersection sees the highest traffic volume. The four miles of road would also be widened.

Engineers believe that the once the completion of three additional segments of South Veterans Parkway (Highway 100) is wrapped in 2027, excessive traffic will be shifted away from Lincoln County 106. Until that time, traffic dilemmas along 106 can't be ignored, and county commissioners need to consider multiple options including the number of lanes, traffic control measures and shared-use paths or trails along the side the road like those along Highway 115.

It's all part of responsible planning says Commissioner Joel Arends.

In a January 10 Sioux Falls Live news story, Arends said: "I do think it is important that we've got orderly, controlled managed growth, and it is my hope that we take this corridor study and incorporate it into our new comprehensive plan."
